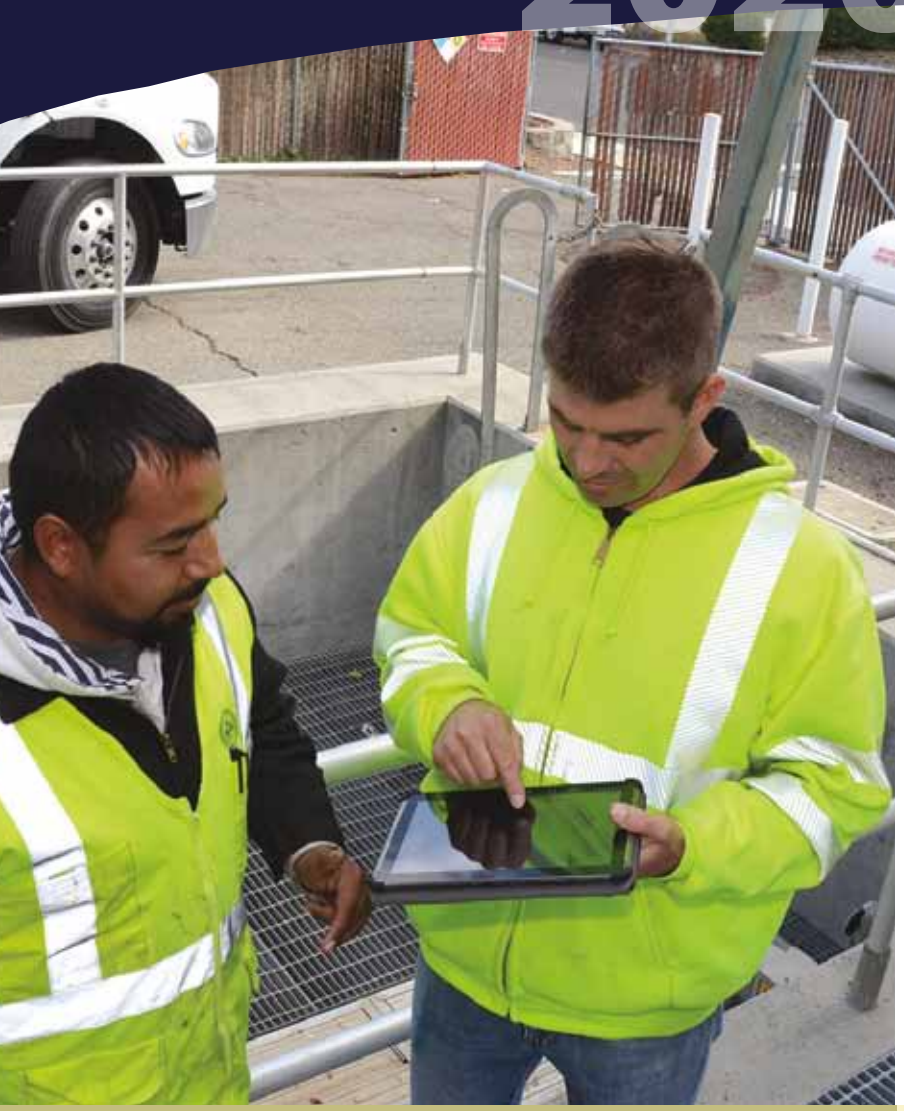
2020 VISION



The City is investing more than $1 million of capital project funds in technology that will improve work efficiency and responsive time. One example is the new paperless work order system for the Water and Sewer Utilities that includes inexpensive computer tablets and mobile hotspots for use in the field. The system fully integrates work and service requests with service histories and the City's Graphic Information System (GIS) records. It reduces data entry time, improves cost tracking, and supports data driven decision-making. Other City departments exploring similar paperless work systems include the Building Services and Street divisions of Public Works, Parks & Recreation, and Silicon Valley Power, the City's electric utility.
